“ I was just thinking the other day when I was going through my closet how there was some stuff that I wanted to give you and had it sorted out and ready to go. Then I received the news. I could not believe it, I did not want to believe it, just writing this tribute I wanted to call and ask you what I should write. You always had the answers for me. I want you to know that i miss you so very much. You were the only person that I could lean on and talk to without being judged. We can sit in the same room for hours at a time and not speak but we still would be communicating even though that did not happen to much cause you always did have something to say but we did and that was special. Even when I moved away we would always pick up where we left off. You were always so giving I look around my home and I see you everywhere all the things you picked up for me during the spring clean up days that i have displayed all over my home so when you came over It made me happy showing you that i valued everything. So not just the material things I also valued our friendship. The bond between us was strong and still is and I dont want to let you go. My family loved you so very much. Every time you walked in a room you always made everyone smile it did not matter what color you were or what size you were you made everyone feel special. The tears we shedded with each other whether it was sadness or tears of laughter with joy I will never forget. Those are moments that I will always treasure. If I only knew then that when I stopped over a couple weeks ago that was going to be the last time I was going to see you I would of spent more time with you instead of being in such a rush with life. Im suppose to say see you soon not goodbye. Im gonna miss you so very much. Now even though I am empty and have a void God put wings on you and said you were ready to go. We shall see each other one day and I know until then you would want us to cherish our moments, to love, to live and go on with life. With your wings now you can fly into the light where the heavens are. Im going to miss you my dear friend and may you rest in peace.
